On the Italian Riviera, an unlikely but strong friendship grows between a human being and a sea monster disguised as a human. Image: Disney/Pixar So you've heard about the new Disney/Pixar animated movie, Luca? It's heartfelt and caring family fun; exactly what we all need in 2021. But did you also hear that the Luca cast had to record their dialog entirely from home? That's right. No hyper-fancy studio environment, huge automated mixing desks and audio engineers, no seriously professional recording booths. Just a plain old-fashioned room (or closet) for their voice acting. You know, real home-brewed stuff – but performed superbly by the Luca cast. Is recording the voice-cast of a blockbuster movie from home even possible, you ask? Well yes, actually. Keeping in mind that Voice123's mighty arsenal of professional voice actors from all over the world happily and confidently records from home studios of all shapes and sizes. They've been doing so for years. But you knew that, didn't you? Still, a Disney/Pixar production is kinda in a different league, one would think, no? Fact is that, if you're like the millions of viewers who've watched the movie already, if you didn't know, you wouldn't be able to tell. The cast of Luca did just fine! The comfort of home The Luca cast brings the animated characters to life and the dialog actually sounds as if they recorded their conversations in the same room. Instead of being miles apart, ensconced in their own homes. The witty one-liners and heartfelt speeches are exactly on point and the voice acting flows perfectly. Image: Disney/Pixar Luca is clearly one of the many accomplishments that overcame a global pandemic. Instead of putting it on the backburner, the studio decided to push through and find ways to overcome the lockdown restrictions. Just because voice actors couldn't physically go into the studio to record, didn't mean the production had to come to a grinding halt. You might wonder, "was there some sprinkle of Disney pixie dust that magically made everything come together? Or was there a genie that granted them three wishes?" As awesome as that would be, real-life works a little differently. But happily, many things came together because the cast of Luca persevered. How did the cast of Luca pull it off? A closet. An iPad. And a microphone. Maybe throw in a mic stand or two. Andrea Warren, the producer of Luca explains that it "involved sending iPads and microphones, and everybody testing out spaces in their houses where the sound would be baffled." Other than that, no special equipment and no industry secrets. Just a simple setup was enough to get the job done. That's actually what makes voice acting so unique. Voices are powerful. They're not limited by external factors like location, studios, or even pandemics! The strongest voices aren't the loudest or the deepest; they're the ones that are willing to try and adapt. That's exactly what the majority of the voice cast of Luca did in this blockbuster. Except for Jacob Tremblay, who recorded most of his audio in a studio, the rest of the cast had to set up their own home studios, which is no small feat. Image: Disney/Pixar Making do Now, recording any audio from home isn't about picking a spot, plugging in, and recording. It takes time and patience to find the right place that has the least noise, interference, and room echo. Yet, line after line, the acting of Luca's voice-cast is fluid, believable, and crystal clear. It's a superb job of proving that when life hands you lemons, you can make the tastiest lemonade! It's also easy to imagine that it was a complete disaster and an exhausting project for the voice cast. However, Jack Dylan Grazer notes that "It was fun, actually. My neighbors probably didn't find it fun because I was just screaming in my closet for that long," he added. "People thought I was probably crazy." Fortunately, no one called 911! But this underscores the value of professional voice actors. A voice actor doesn't need a special mic or booth in order to perform convincingly. Some of the best voice acting has been done in closets. Curious to see what it was like for the voice actors? Check out this behind-the-scenes footage. You'll see the voice cast performing their lines with gusto, sometimes multiple times before nailing it. You'll also see the small closet spaces and lack of ventilation that they had to work in. But none of those roadblocks prevented Luca from reaching its final destination; a blockbuster. Image: Disney/Pixar How can you achieve similar sustainability with your projects? Covid-19 has put a stop to many things; vacations, retreats, even something as simple as a visit to the hairdresser. But there's no reason why the pandemic should stop your voiceover project. The key is to be organized, flexible, and plan carefully. Here are few things to keep in mind: Be resourceful: There's a huge variety of software, DAW's and programs that can be used anywhere, anytime. You don't need a corporate office setup. A compatible laptop will work just fine. This can allow you to edit, structure, design, and create digital masterpieces remotely. Outsource: There are freelancers around the world who have the setup needed to edit videos/audios, design storyboards, write scripts, and advertise your product/service. Keep an open mind: So you've had voice actors come into your studio for 20 years to record the voiceovers you need? These days professional voice actors can provide the same voice acting quality and excellence from their own home studios. Be flexible: If something doesn't work, find alternatives. The last year has shown that I've always done it this way' isn't always possible or even the best way to get things done. Craft a clear workback schedule: Know your deadlines. Have clear dates, goals, and timeframes and communicate that to everyone involved in the project. Hire a professional voice actor: You can trust the pros to take direction, add valuable input, and deliver a top-quality recording. Final thoughts: Blockbuster movies often have fan associations that become trends. James Bond? Martinis. Star Wars? Light Sabers. Luca? A blockbuster from home. So while there's no guarantee that your project will be all smooth sailing, the top-class recordings of Luca's voice-cast prove that where there's a will, there's a way. All it takes is perseverance, some tech-know-how, and professionalism. We may not be able to grant you three wishes, but we can still 'wish' you all the best with your pandemic projects. May your recording projects prove to be the greatest success! Looking for more information?
